Hard disk failures can occur as a result of heavy wear and tear over time. A hard disk's read and write heads are used to retrieve or recode data stored on the hard disk using a disk platter that rotates at high speed. Only a complete surface scan of the hard disks on the used machine will reveal faulty sectors.

If the examiner cannot understand your writing, they will become irritated. If a poorly written answer cannot be read, it will not be graded. Don't use illegible writing to conceal a lack of information. Never repeat information, even in a concluding paragraph. No matter how many times you repeat the same point, you can only get the marks once.
